Dr Humble

An update to the arrival of our newest Allergist Dr Brandon Humble. He will arrive in Tulsa in July and his schedule has been opened to take new patients starting in August. Dr Humble is a native Oklahoman, who recently completed his Allergy & Immunology fellowship at the University of Kansas.

Allergy Injections and Summer Safety

Summer is upon us and who doesn't enjoy spending time outdoors?! All of us at Allergy Clinic of Tulsa care about our patients' well being. We ask that you take special care during the hot summer temperatures by wearing sunscreen and applying regularly, as well as staying hydrated.

If you are sunburned or if you are overheated from being outside, you should not get your allergy injection. Please be sure to exercise these precautions when receiving your allergy injections, as well:

- Avoid exercise for 1 hour before and 2 hours after receiving your injections.
- Cool down your car
- Drink plenty of water
- Limit your exposure to lawn and garden activities the day of your injection.

Food Restrictions in Allergist's Waiting Room?

Medically, there is a minimal risk to food allergic patients from casual exposure to foods, such as would happen if someone were eating in the waiting room. Contact with food-covered chairs and airborne food allergens does not cause a life-threatening reaction. Such exposure is part of daily life, so there is no way to completely avoid it. A food must be ingested to cause such a severe reaction. To that end, food sharing is discouraged.

The general perception is that casual food exposure does pose a risk and for that reason, many offices, including ours, ban food in the waiting room.
