12 HONOR ROLL OF DONORS

A letter from our Board Chair

Friends,

As you read this issue of Mission Report, please take a few moments to reflect on the impact of “neighbors helping neighbors” through philanthropic support. The list of donors tells an overall story of gifts, large and small, given by our community members. Those gifts may honor a health care professional who provided care and kindness to the donor or to a member of their family. Contributions are also made in loving remembrance of friends and family members. All gifts help make a difference in the lives of others – people we know and people we may never meet.

Two wonderful examples of philanthropy and the difference donations make are shared with you in this issue. One article tells a story of Austin McNew who was involved in a sledding accident that caused him to be a paraplegic. Through the Reid Health Foundation, a FES machine was purchased to help aide in his therapy. The other story is about a Richmond family who has a long history of serving and donating to the Reid Health Foundation. To remember her beloved husband Jack who recently passed away, Debra Edelman’s most recent gift of $1 million to the Foundation is being used to support heart health through the newly named Jack Edelman Cardiac Catheterization Center.

We are truly blessed to have a community that is “right beside you” in your health care journey!

Gratefully, Robin Henry

MAKING RECOVERY A REALITY

After a tragic accident leaves a local high school football star paralyzed, new physical therapy technology makes advanced recovery a reality.

As a Junior at Northeastern High school, Austin McNew was both an athlete and star student. He loved watching football, fishing, and still made time for his studies. He was excited to step onto the football field as a senior in the upcoming season.

In January 2016, life changed forever for the 17-year-old. He and his friends were sledding near his family's home in Fountain City when his sled crashed. After the crash, he found he wasn't able to get up and brush off the snow. He couldn't move at all.

Austin was transported to Reid Health's emergency department where testing revealed the extent of his injury. The crash caused instant paralysis when two vertebrae in his cervical spine compressed and damaged his spinal cord. After being flown to IU Methodist in Indianapolis, he underwent emergency surgery to realign C4 and C5 and started on the long road to recovery.

Due to the nature of his injury, his doctors weren't sure about his long term prognosis. While Austin was eager to get back on the football field, his doctors couldn't promise him he would ever walk again.

His family and community rallied around him and encouraged him with wide-reaching social media campaigns, fundraising efforts, and prayers. More than 800 “#McNewStrong” t-shirts were sold, raising money to purchase a van to transport Austin and his wheelchair.

Austin’s determination and optimism pushed him through intense physical therapy. Progress was slow, but six months after the accident, he had his first breakthrough—he realized he could wiggle his toes and thumbs.

Austin’s parents are his perennial supporters and side-kicks. His mother Teresa and father Michael have been by his side every day of his journey. In the early days following their son’s injury, they read him the thousands of supportive messages Austin received.

They also keep an eye out for new therapies that could help Austin’s recovery. Soon after the accident, his mother, a local teacher, learned about functional electrical stimulation (FES) technology. “After Austin’s injury, I just started looking and researching,” she remembers. “And after talking with other mothers, this just kept coming up: ‘FES,’ ‘FES.’”

FES is a therapeutic technique that electrically stimulates nerves to cause muscle contractions. A physical therapist applies adhesive patches over a patient’s muscles, like quadriceps, and turns on the machine. Electrical pulses send messages to the muscles, telling them to contract like they would when pedaling a bike. This repetitive movement helps to condition and strengthen a paralyzed person’s muscles.

Teresa and Michael were eager to learn if it was something that could help their son. When they found that no local hospitals had an FES machine, they looked to Austin’s therapists at Reid Health for advice.

“They mentioned the FES to our therapists, who came to me to see if there was anything Reid Foundation could do to help,” says Justin Burkhardt, the director of Reid Foundation. Thankfully, there was. “We worked with Restorative Therapies (an FES manufacturer) to bring this great technology to Reid Health.”

continued...

The new equipment arrived to Reid Health about a year after Austin's accident. Just in time for the holidays.

"We were very excited," says Michael, "they even put a bow on it," adds Teresa.

After Reid Health therapists were trained on the new equipment, FES was incorporated into Austin's and many other patients' therapy sessions.

Austin's strength has increased rapidly since the FES was added to his routine. He and his therapy team diligently track his improvement. Austin recites the metrics that measure his progress and strength with the same excitement as he does his old football stats. In July 2017, he became strong enough to sit upright for a minute without support, something that hadn't been possible before FES. By December, he was able to sit unassisted for more than 40 minutes.

FES is improving outcomes for many Reid Health therapy patients thanks to generous contributions to Reid Foundation. "We're so grateful," says Justin. "The gifts we received made this therapy accessible for Austin and other individuals in our region."

Reid Health's new FES equipment is supported by hands-on advice from Restorative Therapies, who are on-call to help with patient therapy. "We've had Restorative Therapy in for clinic days... We schedule all our patients who use the FES and have their clinic expert help us problem-solve, troubleshoot, and try new things," says Rick Johnson, the manager of Inpatient and ARU Rehabilitation Therapy Services. This adds up to improved and advanced care for every Reid Health patient who uses FES.

Two years after his accident, Austin continues to be an inspiration to those around him. He's currently a double major in psychology and political science at Indiana University East, and still finds the time for physical and occupational therapy three times a week. Every Friday, he and his therapists work on walking. When supported by a harness that helps lift his body weight, Austin is now able to take steps across the physical therapy room.

His therapists say it's hard to overstate how incredible this is for a quadriplegic person. And his entire support team, including mom, dad, therapists Rick and Darcey, and thousands of followers on Twitter, are all beaming with pride.

'JACK EDELMAN CARDIAC CATHETERIZATION CENTER' TO HONOR LATE PHILANTHROPIST

Jack Edelman loved his community, was a veteran who served his country, and a generous mentor who gave much of his time and resources in his life to help others – especially for the cause of community health.

When Jack passed away in October 2017 at 92, his wife of 64 years, Debra, decided to do even more in his honor. With a gift of $1 million to Reid Health Foundation in honor of her late husband, the Edelman's combined lifelong contributions reached $2.12 million – becoming the largest contribution ever received by the Foundation from individual donors.

"We are humbled and we are extremely grateful for Jack and Debra's confidence in Reid," said Randy Kirk, Reid Health Vice President/Foundation President, of the Edelman's generosity. "Jack and Debra have never sought attention for their years of support that has helped Reid Health and the community in so many ways. Debra's leadership with the Foundation board fueled our success with the New Reid capital campaign. Further, her many years co-chairing Art to Heart, a collaborative gala partnership with the Richmond Art Museum, brought one of the greatest fund-raising success stories to our community's history."

To commemorate the most recent gift, ceremonies in May will celebrate the renaming of the Reid Health Outpatient Cardiac Catheterization Center to the Jack Edelman Cardiac Catheterization Center. The outpatient cath lab is on the second floor of the Outpatient Care Center at 1100 Reid Parkway.

Kirk said the Edelmanns have long supported the health care system's mission and fund-raising efforts. Side by side, they were familiar faces at Reid Health Foundation events over the years.

"Jack and Debra have such a long history of commitment to their community and support for Reid's mission to provide high quality care to the patients we serve," Kirk said.

The Edelmanns are founders of the Recycling Center, Inc. in Richmond and also owners of Franklin Iron & Metal Corp. in Dayton, OH. Debra Edelman served 18 years on the Foundation board, including as board chair in 2000 and 2001 when the health system began planning the construction and move to a new campus. "She was instrumental in leading the vision that resulted in a $46 million transfer of Foundation funds to help pay for the New Reid," Kirk said.

After a serious illness suffered by Jack in 2004, the Edelmanns became dedicated supporters of the project to build a replacement hospital. At the time, Debra Edelman cited "exemplary care" for her husband during a three-week hospital stay on the former Chester Boulevard campus. In that stay, however, they experienced some of the constraints of the former campus – small patient rooms, for example -- that illustrated the need for an updated facility. As grateful patient and spouse, the experience prompted Jack and Debra to give $1 million toward the New Reid project in 2005.

As a result of their 2005 philanthropy, two areas of the campus already bear the family name – the Jack & Debra Edelman Board Room in the administration area, and the Israel "Izzy" Edelman Cardiac Center, a cardiac diagnostics area, in tribute to the memory of their late son Israel "Izzy" Edelman.

Red Dress Ball

The courtiers of the kingdom of Reid Health traveled from near and far to participate in this year's Red Dress Ball gala. With knights in shining armor lining the walls, a Cinderella carriage, and a feast fit for a king, guests danced the night away to this year's theme "Queen of Hearts." As with previous years this event funds the Reid Health AED program which provides the much needed machine to not-for-profits in Reid's service area.
