Adam Barnosky is a shareholder at the firm and Chair of the Restaurant & Hospitality Practice Group.

Adam brings a solutions-oriented approach to clients in the restaurant, hospitality, retail, and commercial real estate industries on land use, licensure, and regulatory compliance matters, in addition to representing clients in corporate transactions, commercial lease negotiations, real estate developments, and alcoholic beverage structure and licensing.

Adam's clients include multi-unit restaurant groups, luxury and boutique hotels, sports and entertainment venues, urban food halls, national retailers, commercial lenders, cannabis companies, and industry-recognized chefs and hospitality operators. He also represents commercial real estate developers, real estate private equity firms and investment trusts (REIFs/REITs), and real estate portfolio and management companies.

Adam regularly advocates for clients before state and municipal boards, including the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, Cannabis Control Commission, Massachusetts Gaming Commission, City of Boston Licensing Board, and Zoning Board of Appeals, as well as various government authorities across Massachusetts.

He is a frequent speaker on restaurant, hospitality, and commercial real estate issues, and his insights have been featured in outlets such as The Boston Globe, Boston Magazine, and New England Real Estate Journal.

In 2018, Adam was appointed by Mayor Yvonne M. Spicer as the inaugural Chair of the Framingham Board of License Commissioners, which licenses and regulates businesses throughout the City, including hotels, restaurants, breweries, package stores, and entertainment facilities. During his tenure, Adam led a comprehensive overhaul of the City's alcoholic beverages regulations and regularly interfaced with local officials, state representatives, and the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

Before joining RIW, Adam worked at a boutique Boston-area law firm and clerked for the Honorable Virginia M. Morgan of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan.

Adam is a frequent contributor to The Industry, the Restaurant & Hospitality Practice Group's quarterly newsletter, and chairs Restaurant Trends, the annual signature event for Boston and New England's Restaurant & Hospitality Industry.
