David Musen is a member of the firm's Corporate, Commercial Real Estate and Hospitality Practice Groups. He advises clients on all types of business transactions, providing contract, general corporate and business advice with a focus on both preventative measures and strategic planning. David focuses his corporate practice on counseling clients in connection with mergers and acquisitions, asset and stock purchases, buy-sell agreements, financing transactions, corporate formation and shareholder/partnership agreements.

In addition, David has a wide range of experience representing clients in the drafting and negotiation of long-term commercial retail leases across the country for both standalone commercial properties and within shopping centers.

Prior to joining Ruberto, Israel & Weiner, David worked at a boutique Boston area law firm as a corporate and commercial real estate associate, and prior to that clerked for the Honorable Christopher J. Panos of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Massachusetts, Central Division.
